

From Sarah Brown McCulloch's Guilford: A Walking Guide (2012):

Henry Hull, 215 State Street, Greek Revival, c1840.

This house is a good example of the expression of Greek Revival taste in Guilford. The basic traits of the style are here but with no flights of fancy. The temple front, the window in the gable, the simple doorway with pilasters and simple entablature (in this case, particularly tall and elegant), and 6/6 sash make it a classic. Henry Hull was married to Lydia Bishop, daughter of Philo Bishop, of No. 205.
