

From Sarah Brown McCulloch's Guilford: A Walking Guide (2012):

133 Whitfield Street, Queen Anne, 1882.

Here is a nice example of a style uncommon in the borough. Bargeboard trim decorates the front gable, the cross gables, and the peaked roof of the spindle-railed porch. It is also present at the ends of the porch roof which displays additional ornamentation along its edge and is supported by turned posts. Patterned shingles on the gables and the two-story bay with pendants add texture.