

From Sarah Brown McCulloch's Guilford: A Walking Guide (2012):

96 Church Street, Italianate and Queen Anne, c1880.

Here is another vernacular residence, in which Italianate and Queen Anne features have been combined and applied to a basic gable-fronted house. The cornice is even heavier than the one on No. 72, and the returns bolder. Below the returns, at the corners, are two flat boards resembling brackets. A stained-glass window in the Italianate style appears at the staircase level. The two-story bay and wraparound porch are also present.
